Frank Klaus Must Have Been Maving a Little Fun With the Frenchmen.

AL 1915, by The Prom Publ. (She Not East World). FRANK KLAUS, accisimed "Cham-pion of the World" in France after his victories over Carpentier and Papie, must have been having a little Papie, must have been having a little fun with the Frenchmen. The following is a paragraph that appeared in "L'Esche des Sporta," one of the largest French sporting publications, last week: "Frank Kinus has returned to America. He declares himself enchanted with his visit to France, and desirous of being matched with no other than the heavyweight champion of his ewn soun-

Guess Frank must have sent that "Interview" back to Paris himself. He hasn't disclosed to us any uncontrolled yearning to mingle with either of the large gentlemen mentioned. We have a mental picture of Frank interfering with the progress of Gunbeat Maith, or McCarty, for that matter. If reminds us of the old story of the army mule. He was one whale of a mele-in the army.
For years he kicked in the ribs of other mules and made life misgrable for the teamsters. At last he became imbued with the notion that his kick was the supreme kick, and that nothing size could compare with it. A new railroad Quess Frank must have sent that "In could compare with it. A new railroad line was laid near the army poet, and the mule saw a large freight engine go rolling up and down, puffing out clouds of amoke and snorting deliance. En-raged, the mule accepted what he re-garded as a challenge, walked out on the pallroad track and turning his business end toward the approaching mon-ster planted his front hoofs firmly be-tween the ties, bent his back like a coll-ed spring, drew in his hoels and calmy waited for the moment to come when he would kick that engine over into the would be a very good thing for the busy Boxing Commission to have all matches made by clube submitted for its approval. That, perhaps, would prevent much mis-matching and many one-sided exhibitions.
